About us: Martine spent the past decade in the field working for the United Nations as a photographer in East Timor, Burundi, DR Congo, Western Sahara and, most recently, in South Sudan.

As a photojournalist, David has been published in TIME Magazine, Le Monde, Australian Geographic and The New York Times. In 2003 he was sent to Iraq as the Official War Photographer for the Australian War Memorial. As a unit stills photographer his credits include Cloudstreet, Drift, Underbelly Razor, Badness, Bikie Wars, Redfern Now, Son of a Gun & Kill Me Three Times.

What's in our bags: check out our gear as we discuss the tools of our trade and our approach to using them.

What to bring: A camera and lens, memory cards, fully charged batteries and tripod. Don't forget to bring along your particular camera manual if you have one. Also pack a water bottle, snacks, hat, sunscreen and sturdy shoes.

Prices start at $275 per person for the standard half day workshop (morning or afternoon). All sessions end with a friendly debrief over a glass of wine and nibbles.

Workshops are limited to 8 people, with a minimum of 4. Details and prices of full day and other specialised workshops will be listed on our website as they become available.
